

This overlay map shows just how big Alaska really is. From Ketchikan to the tip of the Aleutians spans the distance from Florida to California, and it's as tall as from Texas to North Dakota. Most of Alaska has no roads whatsoever.

Part of my old trapline and some hiking trails from Red Cabin. My trapline ran about 100 miles.

A closer view of the location of Red Cabin shows Cookie's Ridge and Ray's and Cookie's Lakes to the south of it.