

Photo by Dave Yoder, Pages 8-9

Author Andrew McCarthy connects with the Irish hills of his forebears on a rugged trek to Carrauntoohil, Ireland's highest peak.

Photo by Dave Yoder, Page 32

A journey's end: Andrew McCarthy (center, in the green jersey) meets his Irish side, the McCarthys.

Photo by Dave Yoder, Page 33
Author Andrew McCarthy (center) creates new memories and shares old ones with his newfound family in Duagh, Ireland.

Photo by Jennifer Wilson, Page 83

Author Jennifer Wilson's daughter, Zadie, husband, Jim, and their dog on a quiet meadow walk in Mrkopalj, Croatia.

Photo by tunart/iStockphoto, Page 95
Havana's Hotel Nacional conjures treasured times in Cuba.

Photo by Joe Yogerst, Page 122
Fasnacht, the carnival before Lent, in Germany.

Photo by Robert Churchill/iStockphoto, Page 145 The backbreaking work of centuries: a rice field worker in Wakayama, Japan.

Photo by Peter McBride, Page 162

Peter McBride fills his impromptu dance card during his Mexican visit.

Photo by Marie Arana, Page 180
The author (far right) and her family on the front stoop of their old Cartavio home in Peru.

Photo by Claudio Divizia/Shutterstock, Page 210
The headstones of Glasgow's old churchyards bear surnames of author Andrew Evans's Scottish ancestors.

Photo by rechitansorin/iStockphoto, Page 216

Author Andrew Evans finds a “haunting and heavy beauty” in the bloody history-steeped Glencoe mountains in Scotland.

Photo by Chris Hill/National Geographic Creative, Pages 244-245
A precarious and misty perch along Northern Ireland's windswept North Antrim coast.