CULTURAL INSIGHT

It's very common for men to shake hands when first introducing themselves in China. Women will also shake hands when in business settings, but in social or casual situations, it is more common for them to nod or simply smile instead, as these gestures show friendliness. So make sure you do the right greeting actions depending on the situation!

CULTURAL INSIGHT

When meeting someone for the first time, some Chinese people will ask Nǐ shì zuò shénme de? This question generally means "What do you do?" or "What is your job?" Don't be surprised if you get asked this by someone you've just met; it's a common icebreaker that people in China use to get to know each other better.

CULTURAL INSIGHT

In China, if a person's invitation gets turned down, it's not common for that person to push for more details regarding why their invitation was declined. Also, if you have to refuse an invitation in China, it's considered better to state the real reason you cannot go rather than making up a lie. So keep these things in mind, listeners!

CULTURAL INSIGHT

When we talk about numbers like telephone numbers, bus numbers and so on, we pronounce 1 as yāo.

For example, a bus number one-oh-one would usually be pronounced as yāo líng yāo in Chinese. You can even use yāo instead of yī meaning "number one" when saying phone numbers. Try it when you are in China! People will be impressed.

CULTURAL INSIGHT

Since China is such a big country, there is a lot of variety between its different cities. So when people from different parts of the country meet, they often have questions about each other's hometown. In these situations, you will often hear Nǐ shì nǎlǐ rén? and Nǐ cóng nǎlǐ lái? In these cases, you just need to state a town or city name in place of a country name. That's it!

CULTURAL INSIGHT

Do you know how to read years like 1950 in Chinese? You might think it would be long and difficult, but actually, it's super easy. You don't have to say shíjiǔ-wǔshí, which is 19-50, or yīqiān-jiǔbǎi-wǔshí, which is 1000-900-50. All you need to do is say it number by number, just like a telephone number. So it could be 1-9-5-0 (one, nine, five, zero), or in Chinese, yī jiǔ wǔ líng, and then nián, the noun for year. In Chinese, the year 1950 is.. yī jiǔ wǔ líng nián.

CULTURAL INSIGHT

在 (Zài) is one of the common Chinese words used to express location. For example, you can use the word zài, to tell a friend where your house is. If you say wǒ jiā zài huāyuán Jiē, you are saying, “I live at Garden Street.” You can replace huāyuán Jiē, meaning “Garden Street,” with any place name to tell someone where you live.

Word 3		我的	wǒ de	my
Word 4		朋友	péngyǒu	friend

CULTURAL INSIGHT

If someone that you didn't expect is knocking at your door in China, the common question you can ask is Shéi a? before opening the door. This means "Who is it?" in a very natural way. It can be used in all sorts of situations, but be careful with your tone. You could sound cheerful, but you could also sound rude, depending on your tone.

CULTURAL INSIGHT

We know the word “when” can be translated in many ways. But the basic translation shénme shíhòu is very important. It’s a useful phrase that can be used in all the situations we’ve talked about. Although sometimes it may cause misunderstandings, if you’re careful with it, you should be able to get the answer you want.

CULTURAL INSIGHT

Nǎlǐ can be replaced by nǎr or nǎ almost all the time in daily conversations. But in the sentence Nǐ shì nǎlǐ rén? you can say Nǐ shì nǎr rén? but not Nǐ shì nǎ rén? The listener might understand what you're trying to say, but it's not good Chinese.

CULTURAL INSIGHT

Tiananmen Square is one of the most recognizable landmarks in all of China. It sits at the center of Beijing, directly across from the Forbidden City. Tiananmen Square is the largest city square in the world and measures 440,000 square meters. Close to the center of the square is Mao Zedong's mausoleum, with The Monument to the People's Heroes located in front. If you have a plan to visit Beijing, this should be on your list of places to visit.

CULTURAL INSIGHT

Because we've learned how to say both "why" and "not" in Chinese, you might think you know how to say "Why not?" as well, right? Well, technically it can be Wèishénme bù? But that's actually not natural Chinese. Although it makes sense, people don't usually say it, and will say something different depending on the situation. So just remember to be careful about using it!

CULTURAL INSIGHT

Although Nǐ yǒu qìchē ma? and Nǐ yǒu méiyǒu qìchē? both mean “do you have a car?”, Nǐ yǒu qìchē ma? is a little more formal than Nǐ yǒu méiyǒu qìchē? When you say Nǐ yǒu méiyǒu qìchē?, you should be careful about your tone, or you might sound rude.

CULTURAL INSIGHT

Do you know how to say “Are you a student?” in Chinese? There are two ways. One is Nǐ shì xuésheng ma? and the other is Nǐ shì bù shì xuésheng? And the rule is the same. Nǐ shì xuésheng ma? is a little formal, so use this one when you are in a formal situation.

Word 1		是的	shì de	yes
Word 2		我	wǒ	I

CULTURAL INSIGHT

In Chinese, if you really want to insist on the fact that you love something but in an informal way, you can use the adverbs *hě*n or fēicháng which mean “very much”, to modify the word xǐhuān. You will certainly hear *Wǒ hě*n xǐhuān jiàqī or Wǒ fēicháng xǐhuān jiàqī! This means “I really like holidays!” It’s stronger than xǐhuān but weaker than ài.

CULTURAL INSIGHT

In the Chinese currency, the 100 RMB note is the highest denomination. The one problem with these little pink notes is having enough change to pay for cheap items. A cash register can run out of small bills relatively quickly with a quick succession of 100 RMB notes. Having small change available is crucial, especially when riding in taxis where they may not have small change. You may find yourself stranded on the roadside with an angry taxi driver waiting for you to get change!

CULTURAL INSIGHT

Imagine somebody has knocked at your door, and you want him or her to come in. You can say jìn lai. But this is a very informal way of addressing someone and you should be careful with your tone, because sometimes it could sound like an order. If you want to invite someone in more formally, you can say qǐng jìn. Literally, this means “please come in”, but here we don’t need to say lái at the end.

CULTURAL INSIGHT

While long-distance domestic telephone calls are pretty cheap in China, international telephone calls are very expensive. Get around the high charges by looking for international IP telephone cards. These require you to dial a 5-digit number and enter a keycode before dialing your destination number, but will cut your per-minute charges. That will make your call home more than affordable!
